We build rugged durability
that stands up to student life.

When it comes to our built-to-last solid hardwood furniture, the interior is as important as the exterior. New England Woodcraft's unique interior four-sided framing bolsters structural integrity and enables top and side panels to be conveniently removed, repaired, and replaced, extending the product's lifespan and lowering long-term maintenance costs.

A FOCUS ON SUSTAINABILITY

Sustainable furniture not only saves the environment. It saves money, too.

While overseas manufacturers continue to use harmful, toxic finishes, we use an environmentally friendly, water-based finishing system — and were one of the first to do so. All of our lumber comes from U.S. sustainable growth forests, and we don't use any monoculture-grown species due to their damaging environmental effects. The entire tree is used in our manufacturing process, with scrap wood turned into shipping pallets or sawdust for local dairy farms.

Sustainable manufacturing also helps save money in the long run. And when the time finally comes to replace your hardwood furniture, it can be donated or repurposed, rather than taking up landfill space. That's a lot you can feel good about.

SOLIDLY MADE IN THE USA

American-made means built well, made to order, and delivered faster.

We remain committed to manufacturing all our furniture in the U.S., including purchasing all components from U.S. suppliers. You can rest easy with shorter lead times and none of the surprises that come with overseas deliveries. Domestic production guarantees consistent quality and provides customers with the option to customize designs.

Most importantly, it minimizes our fossil fuel consumption and carbon footprint. U.S. manufacturers are held to high environmental standards, so you can count on us to provide sustainable, earth-friendly products.
